Mr. Wall has worked alongside attorneys at Alavi Anaipakos in significant lawsuits on behalf of franchise owners, oil and gas shareholders, and prominent families, among others. For the first 15 years of his career, he primarily represented large corporate entities, including Hoechst Celanese, Exxon Mobil, and General Electric. In 2001, he moved to New Orleans, became a member of the Louisiana bar, and worked at a firm specializing in national class actions. He returned to Texas in 2004, where he now represents both plaintiffs and defendants, largely in business disputes.

His commitment to improving the legal profession includes his current role as a Constitutional Law Instructor at the University of Houston, where he has helped prepare future generations of lawyers for more than 30 years. Mr. Wall's work on behalf of aspiring attorneys also includes his prior position as a Government Instructor at Houston Community College.

Representative Cases
